DEAR Jim

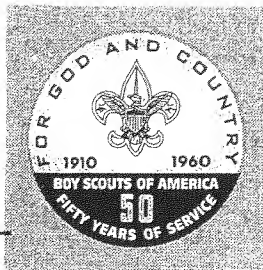

HERE it is and I hope it's O.K.
A report like this DOESN'T look
as good when typed at home or a 20 yr portable as one done on a new I.D.M. typewriter at the office
but I guess it will do.

I have only one copy which I would just as soon destroy - but I will keep it until you get this original in case you want me to make changes

November 30, 1960.

TO MR. JAMES McCLUSKEY:

SUBJECT: Robert Morton.

On the afternoon of November 10, Morton and I went to Detroit as you instructed, to meet on the following day with Jim Gelwicks in connection with exhibit space for the 1961 Annual Meeting. We had dinner together and then walked around town a bit, looking over Cobble Hall and the Ford Auditorium, returning to the hotel about 9:30 P.M. with the understanding that we would meet at 8:30 A.M. the following day for a breakfast meeting with Jim Gelwicks and some other fellows to discuss our Annual Meeting plans.

Sometime during the early hours of November 11, --- I haven't any idea exactly what time it was because I was fast asleep, --- Bob phoned and said he would not be able to make our breakfast meeting because he was in a jam. I asked him where he was and received a vague answer. My impression was he hung up so I couldn't ask more questions. Please bear in mind I was awakened from a deep sleep and probably wasn't as alert as I might otherwise have been. At any rate, after I awakened at my usual time and remembered this phone call, it disturbed me greatly. I knew very well I could not leave Detroit without finding out definitely what happened to Morton, but wasn't quite sure how to go about finding out. It then occurred to me that the Local Council with its resources of information might be able to help me, so I called on my good friend, Bob Kilmer for assistance.

Kilmer suggested I give him an hour or two to "nose around" and then call him back. On the call back, Kilmer said he learned Morton was picked up by the Detroit Police Vice Squad and had been charged with "accosting and soliciting". He went on to say Morton was being tried that morning before Judge Gillis in the Detroit Recorder's Court. I jumped into a cab and went directly to the Court to see what I could find out.

As soon as I walked into the courtroom, Morton saw me and rushed up saying something to this effect, -- "This is much worse than you think. I had to hire a lawyer and will probably have to resign" --. I just had time to ask him if he had gotten the Organization involved and he answered something like this --, "No, I spent the night in jail to avoid telling them I was connected with the Boy Scouts of America" -- whereupon the Court policeman grabbed him and told him to "get back to the bench".

Subject: Robert Morton

When I walked in, the Court was in recess and it was obvious that Morton's trial had not yet come up, so I sat down on the visitors' bench to see what was going to happen. A few minutes after I sat down, a gentleman approached me to inquire if I would stand as a "character witness" for Morton. I asked him who he was and learned he was Mr. Joseph Lutomski, the lawyer Morton had engaged. I told him as long as Morton had spent the night in jail to avoid revealing his connection with our Organization, there was no reason for my doing so.

Morton's case went on shortly after this, but the distance separating me from the proceedings made it impossible to hear what was going on. After some questions back and forth, which I was unable to hear, it appeared the Judge rendered a decision of either "not guilty" or "case dismissed". As Morton and the lawyer left the courtroom, I followed them out and the lawyer said to me, "Everything turned out all right, Mr. Mueller, but this man will have to resign from your Organization and should undergo medical treatment". He went on to say, "I have two brothers in Scouting here in Detroit and I know your Organization would not want to have this man continue with it."

Even up to now I wasn't quite sure exactly what this was all about, but a light was beginning to glimmer in my mind so I asked the lawyer, with what must have seemed to him like vast naivete, whether it was a man or woman involved in this situation. He told me it was a man and a member of the Detroit Police Department Vice Squad. Morton paid the lawyer, obtained his effects from the personal property department of the Court and I asked him to come with me to the hotel to fill in the details.

His story was that some people are bi-sexual and that he is one of those so afflicted. The night before he left the hotel, after we parted, he went to an all-night movie. In the men's room, he propositioned a man, who turned out to be on the Vice Squad of the Detroit Police, whereupon he was arrested. He was released, according to his story, because in answer to questions, he told the Judge the policeman spoke to him first, that he was a salesman for a camping goods concern calling on a local sporting goods store, that he had never been arrested before, was a resident of Chicago and was returning there that afternoon.

Morton told me, "You might as well know I have had men before and I couldn't guarantee that I won't have the urge again". It seemed as he was talking that he was building a compulsion within himself to get this thing off his chest and it was almost like watching a man destroy himself.

He was deeply ashamed and extremely contrite for having let you and me down.

I told Morton I was certain he was finished, but needed to talk with you before giving him a final word. By this time, it was luncheon time in New Brunswick, so I requested him to return to Chicago at once but under no circumstances to go to our office there. I called you immediately after lunch, from Detroit, and gave you my verbal report. You told me, "he is finished as of right now," which decision I passed on to Morton as soon as I could reach him in Chicago.

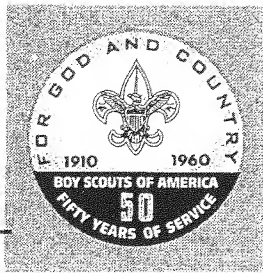

I had promised to call Bob Kilmer back to let him know how this turned out. Kilmer was not in when I called, but Joe Brinton had been alerted and took my call. I simply told Brinton the case was dismissed, that the name of the Boy Scouts of America had not come into the situation in any way, that we were discharging Morton at once and requested him to keep the matter confidential. I also called Mr. Lutomski the lawyer, before leaving Detroit to tell him of our decision. He seemed quite relieved that we took such prompt action.
